

Pretty 'Vo Column

Even though it might not always show, a PVC can require quite some time and effort to make. However, we as (board) members sometimes don't have this time. Well, today is such a day, and it shows in all parts of the PVC. Sorry :(So, which parts of this week's PVC are so bad? Well, let's start! The title of the first column, this one. You would think that it's gonna be a lot of fun to read, but the only reason for the title is that there aren't a lot of other short V words. Then the variety of columns, normally about 2 or 3, are written by the chief editor. Now it's just this single one. Of course, we value the other columns, but it might show that also those were written in 10 minutes max. Finally, the puzzle; the only reason for most of you to read this paper anyways, it's way too easy, so that's free beer for those who get here first. But oh well, at least we've got something right. Oh, and this PVC wasn't done at 16:00 as well. All in all, a lot of bad parts. BUT! that only leaves more room for good vibes at the drink and at the LAN. Have fun in the sun!

A lovely daaay

From Lars

It is the end of March, and as of a few days, the winter has left us to bring us the warmth of Spring. The last few days, we have noticed it in the weather, but the spirits of people have also been lifted with the good weather. The time of thick winter jackets is over, and throughout the days, a jacket is not even needed. We can also notice it on campus. Now that the corona restrictions have almost been completely lifted, the campus is blooming with life again. The tables and benches on the O&O square are permanently filled during lunch, and every time I cycle to campus in the afternoon, there are always people enjoying the weather and taking a stroll. With April coming closer, we also have the transition to daylight savings time. Although this does mean that we have an hour less to game during the LAN this weekend, it also means that we can enjoy the day more and that we can enjoy the sun outside for just an hour longer. I hope that you will also enjoy the weather today during the Friday AD, and don't forget to use sunscreen if you don't want to end up like a red shrimp.

Bartenders' blog

From the teppers

After, for some of you, a long exam, a refreshing drink on Friday afternoon is always a treat. Today we can do this in the company of some nice weather and beautiful sunshine. Don't hesitate to get this refreshing drink in the form of a nice beer or a Weizen at the bar. Even though we have been able to drink like covid did not exist for quite some while now, finally, all regulations were lifted, and all I can say is let's use it as an excuse to enjoy this drink even more. A period of covid regulations has created some lack of alcohol tolerance. Maybe you have already noticed this in some of our members or maybe even yourselves. At least our toilets have noticed it and so a tiny request from them to try not throwing up in them. I think they'll appreciate it a lot. One of us can also appreciate this, as he does not want to bike back in the freezing cold. Yesterday, he may have been a bit too drunk, and his coat got stolen. To quote, "They thought it looked too much like a woman's cote". Thus, if you can get it back from Newton, he would thank you with a beautiful chug (of course, after the drink). So get out your sunglasses and stay hydrated with a cold beer and have fun!

Tasty

From Mikkel

Today, our potential future members were introduced to the study at the Taster Days (formerly the Open Days). I hope that the student association paid enough to the UT, as an 'Auditioner Days' or 'Alpha Days', the last would probably attract some MBO Sport and Beweging students sound a lot worse.

It is nice to see that the Taster Days are more inclusive this year because we now have a mute person as coordinator. Denise has only lost her voice last Monday, so her sign language was not up to par yet. Next to this, even though I now temporarily have a limp, I was still allowed to help with the Taster Days.

It went, as usual, parents asking if their children could still make friends even if they were asocial. But with the introduction of the numerus fixus next year, new amazing moments showed up. For example: When I casually mentioned the aforementioned limit on new students, one girl looked a bit shocked; apparently, she was not aware that we have a numerus fixus starting next year, and the deadline was past January. I think she will take a gap year.

All in all a mediocre success, as we could not convince the study seekers to join us with a nice 0.5L Weizen at this drink.

LAN!

From the LANCie

This weekend the LANCie is organizing an amazing LAN party again. A LAN party is an event where there will be lots of gamers gathered in a single room, usually spanning multiple days. Our LAN party will last 48 hours, starting today at 20:00, in the SmartXP. A LAN party usually has a theme, and so does ours. This time the theme is AstronomIA, so we are going to space. There will be competitions in Splitgate, Halo, Space Invaders and even Among us! There is also a mystery game yet to be revealed! You can win amazing prizes in these competitions. But these are not the only games that can be played if you want to play other games with some friends you are completely free to do so. We also arranged a console corner where there will be a Wii and a Nintendo Switch, and maybe some other consoles will come as well, so you can play Mario Kart till the end of days. Of course, sitting in a room for 48 hours will make you hungry, so on Saturday, we arranged a frietkraam, which will serve fries and snacks till you drop and on Sunday burgers from BurgerMe will come. We even moved the cookie corner from the IA room to the SmartXP. This is an event you don't want to miss!

WANTED

Reward €10,-

From a sober officer internal Affairs

Looking for someone who is bored, wants to get my bike from a ditch near the airport and make sure that the breaks are only active when I ask them to be active. Interested? Mail to Barrum@inter-actief.net

Public Void Puzzle();

Every public void close() contains a puzzle to exercise your mind. This puzzle is based on a world-wide hype which has been going on for a few months now. We're talking about Wordle, however, we, of course, can't do a normal interactive Wordle in here. So this one will have a little twist: the guess results aren't directly tied to the guesses. This means that one table shows all guesses in a random order. And the other table shows all guess results in a different random order.

Need more background information on how normal Wordle works? Take a look at <https://www.nytimes.com/games/wordle/index.html>

If you need some more motivation: the first person or group to hand over the correct solution to the bartenders will receive eleven free drinks from the bartenders!

Guesses:

F	U	N	K	Y
B	Y	L	A	W
B	E	G	I	N
M	O	T	H	S
P	R	O	U	D

Guess results:

Green
		Green
			Yellow
	Yellow
Green		Yellow

Colofon

Chief Editor Wouter Suidgeest
Design Yoei Otten